THE SITUATION IN TENNESSEE.

Matters are approaching a crisis in Middle Tennessee. General Hoop, after his densat at Columbia, retired across the Duck river, reorganized his army, and has again advanced. driving in our pickets, and forcing General THOMAS' outposts back towards Nashville. Franklin and Columbia have probably been evacuated by our troops, and General Triomas will, no doubt, take a position and offer battle somewhere in the open country Immediately south of Nashville. Our news from that region this morning indicates that a battle is momentarily expected, and, while it must take place within the next three days. and must be bloody and desporate on both sides, there can be no doubt that success will attend our arms, as usual. That stern and careful General, THOMAS, has concentrated at Nashville and vicinity every available man, and has now under his command an army fully equal to that commanded by General Hoop. In addition to this he has ordered up from Paducah the army corps of the famous Pennsylvania chieftain, Gen. A. J. SMITH, which is known to be alvery strong one, and bearing the noble record of having been victorious in every battle in which it has been engaged. General Hoop's design in this advance movement must be evident to the simplest mind. It is not that he hopes to destroy General THOMAS' army, but that he wishes to secure the salvation of his own, which is certainly in a most desperate condition. The design of the Rebels is to turn General THOMAS' position on the left of Nashville, and, moving towards Chattanooga, make good his escapto East Tennessee, where, joined by Bunca INDIDGE, he seeks rests and security in the mountains. In the event of the success of such a movement, he might attempt to secure stores, &c., from Kentucky, and then move to join General Lun, The movement is fraught with such risks, and has such little prospect of success, that we cannot understand how even that very eccentric man, General J. B. Hoop, could have adopted it. That General THOMAS will defeat him before Nashville we have no doubt. That he will pursue him vigorously is as certain, and the destruction of the Rebel army in Tennessee will be the result of the great plans of Lieutenant-General GRANT. It will be a source of satisfaction to the friends of the Union to know, in connection with this matter, that General JAMES H. WILSON, the distinguished cavalry leader, has thoroughly organized the cavalry corps of General Thomas' army. With this auxiliary, success will not long be

Since writing the above we see that Franklin has been attacked, and that the enemy has been repulsed, with the loss of six thousand in killed and wounded, and one thousand taken prisoners.

THE REBEL FINANCES.

subject merely to our conjectures.

The unstable and baseless character of the Rebellion is in nothing so strongly exemplified as in its financial condition. The currency of the so-called Confederate Government is fearfully below par. We mean, of course, the par of gold. A paper dollar issued from the money mill of the Rebel Secretary of the Treasury is practically estimated in the South itself as worth about one cent, specie. Indeed, we are not quite sure that it is held at that valuation among the Southern people. We saw it stated only the other day that a upwards of one hundred dollars in Confederate funds; and we know that in the days that preceded the war, when bank notes were redeemable in gold and silver, a cord of wood in the South would not have cost more than three or four dollars.

But the price of a cord of wood is only a single illustration of the low opinion which the Rebels have of the credit of their own Government. The price of everything else is in the same proportion. Now from this depreciation of the Confederate treasury notes the world can draw but one inference, and forefathers to revolution, in the foremost of that is that the Rebels themselves have little or no faith in the ultimate success of their cause. There is no better criterion of the confidence of a population, or of their want of confidence, he the soundness and prosparity of their Government, than the readiness or hesitation with which they accept its promises to pay. Judged by this rule, there is but a small modelum of belief among Southern men | Freedom was triumphant, and peace returned, and women in the power of Mr. JEFFERSON Davis and his conference to help the second States safely and triumphantly out of the fearful trouble in which they have involved them.

No man who had a national and wellfounded trust in the final success of the Rebei-Great Britain. The cotton and rice and to supremacy of the lawful authority restored. bacco and sugar crops of the South would, under proper cultivation by paid labor and a tien, be sufficient to produce a revenue amply a comparatively brief period or time.

The Southern people all feet and under- PARKE CUSTIS LEE. stand this theroughly. And yet they will not take the bonds of the Rebel Government, ex- Southern power. Without them the tottering cept at a fearful discount! Why is this, unless the Southern people are persuaded that the corner-stone, and although by their talent it increases at the family are invited so actead her corner-stone, and although by their talent it increases at 1 or corner by the family are invited as a fearful discount?

Rebellion must eventually, aponer or later, yield to the superior military and financial strength of the Nation? It is, indeed, a secret yet abiding conviction that the Confederate Government must go down in the the value of its currency. Even the army is beginning to feel the atrain of this disastrous depression of the Rebel finances, and a movement is already made in the Congress at Richmond to lighten its pressure on the Robel officers and privates. The Richmond Enquirer of Saturday advecates the passage of a bill now before Congruss to provide uniforms and clothing for all officers holding rank interior to brigadier-general. It takes the ground that their pay is insufthem. The article winds up with the follow-

"A single general's pay in gold would do more to support the men and editors than twelve months pay in the present currency. Indeed we would sovice every officer and soldier to take one months pay in gold and give a receipt for all pay during the remaindent the war. It would be recomment to the divergence and economy on the part of the Government policy for the men. But we hope Congress use the bill providing uniforms."

The Confederate soldiers may fight without pay, and it has been a boast of the South that they do fight for principle and not for money. But they cannot fight without clothes. The want of food and raiment tells with signal force against the natural pluck and chivalry of the best of troops in all countries. Nothing will sooner bring the Rebel army to a surrender at discretion than starving stomachs and reezing bodies. The Rebel statesmen or egislators seem to comprehend this important physiological and psychological fact, and they are proceeding with all due haste to make provision for it. In the Rebel Congress, on last Friday, a bill providing for the recovery of the currency from its depreciation by exempting it from taxation, and reassuring the public of its ultimate payment in full, and the determination to issue no more, was introduced, and it is said to be probable that the measure will be promptly carried through both Houses.

On the whole, the Rebel finances are in a had, if not desperate plight, and are not likely to be retrieved by any human ingenuity. In the meanwhile the National Treasury is prosperous, and our people were never more confident of seeing the war successfully through.

GARIES LDI AND THE UNITED STATES. The Rebel sheet published in London known as the Index, together with several English journals, have been recently circulating a story that GAMMALDI had changed his views regarding the American war. The story was gotten up for effect by a crazybrained Scotchman, who published a letter stating that the great Italian had seen reason to recant his opinious hitherto expressed in favor of the North, and that now his whole sympathy was given to the South.

A loyal American wrote to Garibaldi concerning the statement, and received an immediate reply, in which he remarks:-My opinion on the American question is well Not only do I hope from it the abolition ery, but I consider the question to be one of all mankind, and woe to the world if the closs not come out victorious from this

This is nailing the lie to the counter, but it will not be allowed publication in the Index; having started the falsehood, that mendacious sheet will stick to it. The English papers may feel ashamed, to a certain extent, of the share they took in slandering this distinguished soldier and friend of universal freedom. What will the English people think of such a wilful perversion of the truth? GABI-HALDI is the idol of the masses; and it looks very much as if the British Cabinet, who advised him to leave the English shores, fearing mighty enthusiasm which his presence was creating, had something to do with this Scotchman's letter. It would have proved a capital way of changing the feelings of the people towards Garinaldi-the man of all men-whom they consider the Champion of Liberty.

But GARIBALDI puts the question at rest in unmistakable language, in a few sentences which will tell with power upon the minds of the English masses. He is a great and he is a good man. His heart is in our cause, and down this rebellion and the accursed despotsees how the result of the conflict is to affect blights all their hopes. They say the South mankind, either for benefit or for untold evil. He realizes that it is Civilization struggling with Ignorance and Barbarism, and he sounds the alarm-"Woe to the world if the North "cord" of wood in Richmond was bringing does not come out victorious!" Let us take new courage from the inspiriting words of GARIBALDI, and push forward to a glorious triumph for Freedom and the Right.

DEGENERATE DESCENDANTS. Among the oldest families of which the Old Dominion boasts, may be found that of LEE. From the earliest settlement of the colony of Virginia, the bearers of its name held prominent places in the councils of the State, and in the army and Cabinet of the nation. When the oppression of Great Britain drove our the fight, bearing the brunt of battle, stood the race of LEG. General HUNRY LIGHTS root Lint, whose soubriqued was "Lighthorse Harry," has written his exploits in the book of history, and Liberty has inscribed his name among her favored votaries. Generals CHARLES and HEXRY Like stood side by side with him in the bloody strife; and when upon the brows of them and their descendants has the nation for whose existence they fought continually showered boners. Numberless Congressmen, numerous generals, and several Senators have been selected from their family.

When, however, the Rebellion broke our lion, would stop for a moment to give the the present generation bearing the distin-Rebel Government any necessary measure of guished name of Lee, forgethil of all the posts credit as regards its liscal fortunes. Let us inscribe on its to ab, "Died from the political deprayity of the bearers of the name. Oht. 1885."

SCRIPTION BUTTORIN Able computists aunounce that there are in our city, at the present time, over twenty-five thousand Southern refugees; and of that number, from the average which have come under our observation, we do not heatate to declare that twenty thousand are Bebels at heart. Too cowardly to remain and fight for the cause ficient to feed them and pay for their clothing | which they in their hearts support, they have too. In a majority of cases their clothing is left their homes, fled from their triends, and either purchased by the officer's friends, or sought refuge beneath the flag which they is borrowed by individuals to pay for would, if they dared, transle under foot. After having found safety and freedom beneath the Government of the United States, instead of giving it their support in return for its protection, they spend their time in plotting mischief, and devising means of stabbing our nation in the back. The fruits of their busy cogitations have ripened, and the late pelarious attempt to destroy the metropolis is the result. The order of General Dix, conasquent thereto, is the right deed at the right time and it behaves the authorities o our city to announce to the "aristocratic" solourners in our midst, that any such attempts in our city will be rewarded with like punishment.

The plan of registering all such refugees is an excellent one, and should be enforced, Some of our citizens may consider it a difficult matter to detect who among us are these runaway "chivalry," but no such difficulty need be anticipated. Most of them boast loudly of their Southern extraction, and, mirabile dictul all we have over met cave been intimate friends of General LES: and acquaintances of JEFFERSON DAVIS. These are their claims; but we are able to assure of our readers, from a bitle knowledge of Southern society, that these boasted aristocrats are, in the sunny South, wint Honorable J. A. HAMMOND, of South Carolina, termed "poor white trash, inferior even to the mud-sills of the North."

If any of them are in reality what they declare themselves to be, they would be the last to boast of their family. Imagine any one of the race of LEE, RHETT, WASHINGTON, CUSTIS, or PINCKNEY declaring to every one whom they met in the street that they owned negroes before they fled from their native land, and hid from their friends beneath a forman's banner. Despite all the attempts at dignity with which our "Southern brethren" attempt to palm themselves upon the credulous of our city, they frequently cannot concest the cloven foot, and their " we is's" and "he are's" cry out in unmistakable words, "We are poor trash!" "We are poor white trash!"

We regret to see that many of our citizens have adopted an idea that to be pro-slavery is to be aristocratic. Such an impression coutains within itself the very essence of shoddyism. If your ancestors are such that you may be proud of them, then the very gentility which you claim will prevent you urging your claims upon others. If your pedigree is not such as to induce you to view it with complacency and pride, then to attempt by bombast and vulgarity to impose upon public credulity is only expose yourselves to general ridicule, Fall back upon TENNYSON, and say with

-" From you blue heavens above us bent, The grand old gardener and his wife Suile at the claims of long descent. Howe'er it be, it seems to me 'T is only noble to be good;

Kind hearts are more than coronets And simple faith than Norman blood." By such a course you will win for yourselves far more respect than by aping aristocracy or professing pro-slavery sentiments. To every Southern refugee we would say a word of advice. Having been born in the Cotton States is no cause for pride at present, especially if you have deserted your home and hidden beneath the protection of your fees. We would advise the adoption of the German
